

Helping kids.
Supporting troops.
Building peace.

Funds raised for War Kids Relief go to help:

- » Build a rehabilitation center in Mosul, Iraq, that will help Iraqi children get out of insurgent groups, get mentally healthy again, and learn new job skills to support themselves safely.
- » Create a job training center in Khost, Afghanistan, that will help Afghani teenagers start their own businesses after they finish high school so they won't be lured into joining militias.
- » Create a program that helps American military kids with parents at war in Iraq and Afghanistan make friends with kids in those countries, so they can help build peace among nations.

- » Expand the Young Ambassador program, which helps kids in the U.S. and Iraq learn about each other and become friends so they can create peace between their countries.
